Work Details: The engineer visited the site. The client requested the radars to be repositioned. Upon inspection, it was found that the external radar was loose and hanging by a wire. Both radars were released, cables rerouted using ladders, and the radars were reset at a lower level. The system was rewired, set up, and tested successfully. Additionally, it was found that the external non-contact activation switch was not wired into the panel; it was rewired and tested. The main light curtain was not functioning due to a fault, and a new set is required. The door was left in deadman close mode.	£492.50
